

Our Favorite Vegas Statues

Jason Leinwand

There are important questions that people must answer as they go through this life. “What was I put on this planet to accomplish?” “Is all you really need love?” “Does there really need to be a “Will & Grace” reboot?” And, of course, “Which statue throughout the Caesars Empire should I take a selfie with?”

What you might not realize is which statue you are seen with on social media says a lot about who you are, what you represent and what your Vegas trip is all about. Therefore, we offer you this helpful guide on which statue to get your selfie game on with. But, sorry, we still can’t answer that “Will & Grace” thing.

The Crazy Girls Sculpture

The famous Crazy Girls statue. Photo courtesy of Caesars Entertainment.

This is the most iconic of all Las Vegas statues. Michael Connie made molds of the real dancers to put it altogether. The motto, “No ‘IFs’ ‘ANDs’ OR...” is the perfect amount of naughty for Sin City. It’s a nod to the current (Crazy Girls) and past (Riviera Hotel) glories of Las Vegas. Planet Hollywood Resort & Casino took this piece of Vegas lore and houses it on the casino floor now bridging the past to the present.

So what does it mean if you take a selfie with The Crazy Girls Sculpture? Maybe it means that you are a history buff. Or, at least, you’re a fan of the buff in general.